Dear Salutation,

I was too fit, too active, too busy with work and life to be sick! That was my mindset when I learned at the age of 52 that two autoimmune conditions had destroyed my kidneys. Confused and frightened, I spent 10 days in the hospital before Northwest Kidney Centers — with the generous support of people like you — stepped in to ease my fears and set me on a path to a healthy life.

Like me, you or someone you love probably knows first-hand how Northwest Kidney Centers keeps people with kidney disease well through dialysis. But did you know how much they depend upon your financial support to enable us to live longer, better lives — even beyond dialysis? I hope you will consider joining me in making a gift today so we can help others living with kidney disease.

I moved to Washington from the Midwest after graduating from college and co-founded my own financial planning firm. I got married. I ran half-marathons. I traveled with family and friends. Life was good! Then, in 2009, I began feeling a little rundown. I had some odd pains here and there, but nothing that held me back. By 2011, I'd spent weeks with what I thought was the flu or a sinus infection. When I finally went to the doctor, some lab work and a referral to a nephrologist resulted in a shocking diagnosis.

My kidneys were functioning at just 7 percent capacity. I was in kidney failure, caused by systemic lupus and vasculitis — conditions I never even knew I had.

When I began dialysis for the first time at Northwest Kidney Centers' Bellevue clinic, I became more at ease and was impressed by the compassion, patience and expertise I encountered. I felt safe there. The dietitians showed me how to eat right for optimum kidney health. Home health educators explained my dialysis options and taught me to dialyze at home. When I decided to get a transplant, the medical staff helped me battle many infections, so I could proceed with the surgery. And once I received my transplant from my sister, I went to classes to learn how to live well with my new kidney.

Your gifts fund so much of what contributes to my healthy life today — the education, training, counseling and support that helps people with kidney disease live full and meaningful lives. Even though I'm no longer dialyzing, I continue to support Northwest Kidney Centers and joined the Foundation Board because I want everyone who faces kidney disease to receive the same outstanding care I received.

Will you please help, too? When you make a gift of $300, $150, $75 or more, you give those living with kidney disease a real chance at life. A gift of any amount makes a life-saving difference for people who count on Northwest Kidney Centers — and you — for a healthy, happy future. Thank you for caring.

Sincerely,

Daintry Price
